Additional Information:

Once upon a time, before we had radio and television, people entertained each other with stories. In medieval times, female storytellers were called “gossips,” and they helped to spread the news among the people, as well as telling old legends, fairy tales, and ballads. Dame Judith, a medieval “gossip,” will visit us from the fourteenth century to tell tales of knights, dragons, courage, and noble deeds. The program includes music and audience participation.

Judith Wynhausen is a professional storyteller and folksinger from Joplin, MO. She also performs as Mother Goose.
